

Our privacy policy is simple: Gist never tracks, stores, or distributes any personally identifying information of its users. Gist is designed to preserve the privacy of users in all circumstances—Gist requests are never stored, not even on device.

Instead of using emails and passwords, Gist relies on iCloud to handle account creation and syncing. This means your Gist account is never associated with a personally identifying email address or phone number—two pieces of information Gist never requests.

Gist's business model is simple—a monthly subscription. There are no ads in Gist, and there are no advertising tracking libraries or mechanisms in Gist. To track usage of the service, simply the date and time of each request is stored in a secure manner.

To generate shortened articles, the content of the webpages, PDFs, and text documents you use with Gist may be sent to Anthropic PBC and/or Groq, Inc for their generative AI services. Please refer to each respective company's Terms of Service for more information.
